Non-traumatic brain injury

“I was really unlucky. I had not been feeling well for a few days and was just getting over a chest infection. I had a nasty headache. I couldn't look at bright lights and I just wanted to be sick all the time. At first we just thought I had the flu. I went up to bed to get some rest.

I don't remember what happened next but Mum say that she came in and she tried to wake me up and I had stiff neck and a terrible headache. She called the ambulance and I was taken straight to hospital.

I was very poorly. I was in intensive care for a long time. The nurses said I had encephalitis.”
