

Feeling like a celebrity when you go back to school

“Right from when Amy got sick, everyone at school was asking me how she was. All the kids kept asking and even the teachers were asking too.

They used to ask me everyday if I had seen her and how she was. They used to talk to me in class, send me text messages and emails.

The class sent Amy a ‘get well soon’ card and a few people went to see her when she was on the ward.

They know now that she is getting better and is going to rehabilitation for a while. They now ask me when she will be back to school. I just tell them that it is hard to know at the moment but she will be back as soon as she can.

It has been quite tiring! People ask me so many questions all the time that I kind of just want Amy to come back now so that they can ask her the questions instead!

I always tell Amy who has been asking after her at school and what has been going on. Amy has been really surprised about how much attention she has had off people when she hasn't even been there!”
